THE NEW MACMILLAN NOVELS

Mr. F. Marion Crawford's new novel

The Diva's Ruby

An exciting story of the finding and looting of a diamond mine and its consequences. These connect curiously with another episode in the life of "Fair Margaret," "The Primadonna." The critics call these books "all well worth reading, 'The Diva's Ruby' the best and strongest of them all."

Illustrated, cloth, $1.50

Miss Zona Gale's new novel

Friendship Village

By the author of "The Loves of Pelleas and Etarre," a book that stands alone in recent fiction for the subtle tenderness in it, which like an autumn atmosphere softens and beautifies the common things of life. Cloth, 12mo, $1.50

Mr. H. G. Wells's brilliant new novel

The War in the Air

By the author of "In the Days of the Comet," "New Worlds for Old," etc. The New York Tribune: "Mr. Wells is beyond question the most plausible romancer of the time. . . . He unfolds a breathlessly interesting story of battle and adventure, but all the time he is thinking of what our vaunted strides in mechanical invention may come to mean. . . . Again and again the story, absorbing as it is, brings the reader to a reflective pause."

Illustrated by Eric Pape. Cloth, $1.50

By Agnes and Egerton Castle

Wroth. Their first novel since "If Youth But Knew—"

By the authors of "The Pride of Jennico," "There is a sweep in this story like the sweep of the open country; a vigor like vigor of youth. . . . there is power behind the tale."—Public Ledger.

PLEASING BOOKS FOR YOUNG READERS

By Clara

Old Man Coyote

Indian life with its charm and mystery is reflected in this group of legends first told by the Indians themselves. "Old Man Coyote," the hero, reminds us somewhat in his pranks of Brer Rabbit of the South, but his deeds far antedate the latter's. In Indian mythology he is a wonderful character, half god, half animal, who is perpetually confusing his identities and thus becoming involved in many foolish and laughable adventures. The book cannot fail to attract all readers. : : : : :

The Fire-Fly's Lovers

A delightful series of fairy-tales of Old Japan is here presented—showing the lighter side of these wonderful people, and telling the legends which still enchant the youngsters of the Sunrise Kingdom. There are fairies, giants, heroes, dragons and dwarfs, the latter being a peculiarly terrible sort of native imps—all shown in a vivid way both in text and picture. : : : : :

Stories of Persian Heroes

A stirring volume replete with Oriental coloring. It is taken direct from the nation's book of kings, called the "Shah-Nameh," and reflects the historic life of Persia and the manners of the people. At the same time it is rammed with knightly deeds and strange adventures as exciting as those of King Arthur's heroes. : : : :

Treasury of Verse For Little Children

A gift book which should make every child's eyes sparkle is this "Treasury of Verse" from many authors. The poems are wisely chosen to suit childish tastes and also to cultivate within them an early appreciation of real poetry. The best authors of England and America are represented, and there are pictures or decorations on every page. Nothing handsomer has ever been offered. : :

WHEN THE TIDE TURNS

By FILSON YOUNG

Author of "The Sands of Pleasure," "The Happy Motorist," "Venus and Cupid, an Impression," "Ireland at the Crossroads," "Christopher Columbus," etc.

WE take pleasure in announcing the appearance of a new book by Filson Young, author of the widely discussed and generally approved "Sands of Pleasure." Although not intended as a sequel to "The Sands of Pleasure," the present work is like it in that it deals with vital present-day soul problems. It is marked even more by its trenchant insight into human character, and also by its remarkable clarity of style and beauty of description. The portions dealing with the scenes and setting of the hero's early life on the Irish Coast cannot fail to charm by their vivid portrayal of the beauty and grandeur of nature there, and their appeal and effect upon the poetry and art of his soul.

SAPPHO IN BOSTON

In order to attract your customer's attention, dwell first on the fact that it is anonymous, and that the author is an English author of wide experience who wants, for some reason of his own, to try the market anonymously. That will interest your customer. Then tell her that the book is witty to a degree, that the repartee in it is of the most sprightly kind, and that the heroine is a Boston girl. Say that the climax will surprise the most experienced guesser of them all.

THIS OUGHT TO START IT. AFTERWARD IT WILL SELL ITSELF.

Tell the Mothers that

not only contains twelve most delightful fairy stories, but that each of these stories is a real genuine "find," historically considered. Tell them that Mr. Williams has put twelve nations into his book, and that the collection, therefore, not only will interest the child hugely but it will be extremely instructive, too. In short, the book kills two birds with one stone. Urge this book upon highly educated mothers who are using care and discrimination in selecting the books for their children. They are the kind to be interested.

The Stroke Oar

By Ralph D. Paine

Author of "A Victory Unforeseen," etc.

It Simply Rips Along—No Stops

A rattling, good college yarn told in a spirited manner by a man who is master of his special field. The action and dash of the book keep the reader constantly on edge—not a dull or superfluous page in the whole tale. The story part hinges on a certain rivalry between the Captain and Stroke Oar of the Yale crew. At a most inopportune moment the Stroke Oar is practically kidnapped, and, by force of circumstances, carried thousands of miles away. To follow him in his adventures until he at last sets foot in New Haven again, only a few days before the great Yale-Harvard boat race, to see how he gets back on the crew, and wins the day—there is enough for any reader.

The "girl" interest in the tale, the jealousy she causes between the Captain and Stroke Oar—here is introduced just the proper "twang," without overdoing it.

NOTES IN SEASON.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY published this week "As Others See Us," by John Graham Brooks, the author of "The Social Unrest," one of the keenest of our social critics, who knows as well as any one the important points that have been made by our foreign critics; "Race Questions, Provincialism, and Other American Problems," by Josiah Royce;

"France and the Alliances," by André Tardieu; and "Anne's Terrible Good Nature," by E. V. Lucas.

DANA ESTES & Co. will have ready next week a new novel by Filson Young, entitled "When the Tide Turns." Like his much-discussed and much-appreciated story "The Sands of Pleasure," the story also deals with vital present-day soul problems, and shows this talented writer's great knowledge of human nature as well as his fine use of the English language. The hero's early life on the Irish coast gives Filson Young opportunity for description of wild nature in its beauty and grandeur, a kind of writing in which he excels.

FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY have just ready "The Law of Christian Healing," by Rev. David Bruce Fitzgerald, a brief consideration of the methods of the modern schools of mental healing and of what attention the church should pay to it; "The Christian Method of Ethics," by Henry W. Clark, who announced such original and startling but practical ideas of Christian life in his "Philosophy of Christian Experience," published last year; "The Coign of Vantage," by W. T. Herridge, a Canadian clergyman, consisting of essays on the conduct of life; also, "The Heart of the Stranger," a story of the Italians on the upper East Side of New York City, by an author who writes under the pseudonym of Christian McLeod.

LITTLE, BROWN & Co. will publish on November 7 "Irma in Italy," a new book by Helen Leah Reed, author of The Brenda Books, etc. Miss Reed has given her heroine a delightful trip through some of the most interesting localities in Italy. There is a definite story unfolded, in which Irma and her companion travellers are actively involved, while Miss Reed's descriptions are so skillfully blended into the course of events that the whole book becomes a most successful exposition of Italian life and atmosphere. They will bring out at the same time "The Elm-Tree Fairy Book," prepared by Clifton Johnson, a rare story teller, whose "Oak-Tree" and "Birch-Tree" fairy books are still prime favorites with the young people.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS will issue November 7 the eagerly-expected life of "Richard Mansfield: the Man and the Actor," by Paul Wilstach, the biography and study of one of the great theatrical figures of our time, written with full knowledge from intimate acquaintance and abounding in delightful stories and able criticism of theatrical matters. The work is in two volumes and has 48 illustrations of great interest. They will also issue on the same date "Out-of-Doors in the Holy Land," by Dr. Henry Van Dyke, with 12 illustrations in full color and many others in black and white, giving wonderful glimpses of the Holy Land of to-day; "Kincaid's Battery," a thrilling novel of New Orleans life just before and during the Civil War, by George W. Cable; also, the 12th edition of John Fox, Jr.'s, great success, "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine."

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.

The prices of net books published under the rules of the American Publishers' Association are preceded in this list by a double asterisk , and the word net follows the price. Brereton, Austin. The life of Henry Irving. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1908. 2 v., 20+381; 10+364 p. il. pls. por. O. cl., *$6.50 net, boxed.

Austin Brereton for nearly twenty-five years was intimately acquainted with Henry Irving. Irving many years before his death selected him as his biographer and made over to him papers and manuscripts to be used in writing his life. The writer, as dramatic critic, had the opportunity to follow the great actor through the long years of his career, and to witness his performances in all the characters identified with him. This fact and the private friendship that he enjoyed seem to have eminently fitted him for his task. Bibliography (2 p.). Index.

Hotchkiss, Chauncey Crafts. A prisoner of the sea; il. by Bert Knight. N. Y., John McBride Co., 1908. c. 260 p. D. cl., $1.50.

A young American doing business in Havana one day realizes that his partner, a Cuban, who suddenly disappears, has robbed him of all his capital. He is obliged at once to take a situation, and finds a place as first mate on board an elegantly fitted yacht, which he is led to suppose is private property. From the start things seem very mysterious to him, but for many chapters he is left in suspense, as is the reader likewise. A lady comes aboard at one of the stopping places, bringing the elements of romance needed to offset the violent acts in which the yacht becomes involved. The climax is most unlooked for, as is the finding of the mate's stolen fortune.

An account of a summer ramble through Ireland. The author entered the country a total stranger, interested in the island chiefly on account of what he had heard and read of its people, its old ruins, its stories and legends, and the reputed beauty of its landscapes. He travelled through sixteen of the thirty-two counties, visiting each of the four divisions of the island, North, East, South and West, and coming in contact with all classes and conditions of its citizens. He has added to the narrative of his experiences bits of Irish history gathered from reliable sources and some interesting legends.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

OCTOBER 31, 1908.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter for advertising pages should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Publishers are requested to furnish title page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers and librarians depend on the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of the "American Catalog," and so forms the basis of trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

COURTESY IN THE BOOKSTORE.

DURING the holiday season, particularly, with strange and often raw help to assist in "keeping store," the proprietor or his chief assistant must see to it personally that strict order is maintained among the salespeople, so that customers may receive prompt if not intelligent service, and, above all, courteous treatment. Shoppers—that is, reasonable shoppers—understand fully the difficulties of the shopkeeper during the rush and "drive" of the holiday season, and are prepared to put up with even an undue amount of stupidity or ignorance on the part of a green helper; but they will insist that this stupidity and ignorance shall be inflicted upon them with courtesy. How often does one hear, "Poor thing, she was so awfully stupid; but wasn't she just too nice and simple about it, poor fool!" But no shopper will for a moment put up with rudeness, whether in the shape of the wit and antics of the "smart" clerk or the inattention or other shortcomings of the boorish or dull attendant. People who enter a store expect three things: (1) to be waited on promptly; (2) to be served intelligently; and (3) to be treated courteously. That is the whole of shopkeeping, and the shopkeeper who fails in any one of these particulars will in the end fail altogether.

Courtesy is one of the greatest assets in any business, especially so in retail merchandising. That is a fact the storekeeper must impress just as rigorously upon his own mind as upon that of his assistant. A little encouragement at a time when every nerve of the conscientious assistant is on the jump, or the badly-frightened green helper is bordering on hysterics, will do much to lighten the burden and soften the strain. The reflex effect of such a course on the treatment of customers is incalculable. To put it bluntly, an assistant who is treated by his employer with the respect due to his position and, as a gentleman should be treated, reflects that treatment in his intercourse with his employer's patrons. If a clerk is cross and unmannerly in his dealings with the people whom he is paid to serve, and is permitted to continue to do so, the trouble must be looked for higher up. As the well-known advertiser says, "There's a Reason."

QUICK-MOVING stock, as every tyro in business knows, is the most profitable kind. In buying, it may not always be possible to "size up" exactly what will go quickly; but if this season, in laying in stock of novelties or of so-called "seasonable" goods, the bookseller will make up his mind that they shall be cleared out before the season is ended, it will help much to make them go. As "left-overs" this class of goods not only diminishes its own value, but also helps to give the store a cheap look—for bargain counters are only necessary evils after all and do not lend a high tone to a bookstore.

A DAY IN A SECOND-HAND BOOK-SHOP.

"OVER BEMERTON'S," a book by E. V. Lucas, recently brought out by The Macmillan Company, is cordially to be recommended to the bookseller—especially to the dealer in second-hand books—as well as to the book collector and all those who appreciate book lore and epigram. The bookseller will enjoy it himself and make friends of those to whom he may pass it on. Aside from the slight thread of romance that runs through the book—it is not a novel in the modern sense of the word—it is full of just the kind of stuff that appeals to the bookish man. One might quote from every page to prove this, but the following will serve as an illustration:

I GO INTO BUSINESS PRO TEM., AND LEARN SOMETHING OF WHAT IT MEANS TO BE A SECOND-HAND BOOKSELLER.

The chief character in the book, a boarder living "over Bemerton's" second-hand bookstore, was writing letters at about noon, when Mrs. Duckie, his landlady, entered to see if he would be so good as to speak to Miss Wagstaff, the niece of Mr. Bemerton, whom she helped to keep shop. Down he went, and found "that bitter mercantile virgin all tears and trouble. She had a telegram to say that her mother was ill, and would she come at once; but Mr. Bemerton was in the country valuing a library, and who was to mind the shop? Could [the boarder] make any suggestion?" To let the boarder speak for himself.

I made the only natural one: I said I would mind it myself.

This apparently had not occurred to her, and it seemed to strike Mrs. Duckie (who is more jealous of the fair fame of what she calls gentlefolks than they themselves are likely ever to be) as an act of impropriety beyond pardon. But I had my way, and at last got Miss Wagstaff off in a hansom; but not before she had showered instructions upon me.

"The prices," she said, "are marked just inside. They are all net, but if any one bought several books you might knock something off. Don't ever knock anything off a cheap book."

"Be very careful," she said, "with people who look at the illustrations. Sometimes they pinch the plates."

"Whatever you do," she said, "don't buy any books."

"Keep an eye," she said, "on the outside shelves."

"Don't let any one," she said, "stand too long reading."

"See that thy don't slip one book into their pocket while they buy another," she said.

"Watch them," she said, "to see that they don't rub out our price and put in another themselves."

That, I think, was her very last counsel. I sank down in a chair in a kind of stupor. I had not been prepared for such revelations of perfidy. I had thought of a second-hand bookshop as being off the main stream of human frailty and temptation; and behold it was the resort of the most abandoned! Is there no natural honesty? I wished that Mr. Bemerton would return and liberate me to walk upstairs out of life again and get on with my make-believe.

It gave me at the same time a new idea of Miss Wagstaff, and I found myself admiring her. How naturally she took these things; how simple and right it seemed to her that customers should be suspect; while I—I had been sunning myself in a comfortable sense of all-pervading virtue, and was now cowering beneath the discovery of the contrary—I, a man of fifty and more, who had some claims to be considered a cosmopolitan and citizen of the world, and she a Cockney spinster with no experience of anything but her home and this shop.

But a customer coming in, I had to suspend my reflections and attend to business, which in this case consisted in replying, with some decision, that we never bought last year's "Whitaker's Almanac." The adaptability of man—how naturally I said "we!"

Apart from the necessity of replenishing his stock by attending sales and buying books; the wearing task of looking narrowly at larcenous fellow-creatures; the pangs that it must cost him to sell the books that he wants to keep; and the attacks made upon his tenderer feelings by unfortunate impoverished creatures with worthless books to sell; apart from these drawbacks, the life of a second-hand bookseller seems to me a happy one. I could myself lead it with considerable contentment. During my four hours of authority I took eleven shillings, met some entertaining people, discovered on the shelves a number of interesting books, and read at intervals a poem I had long known by repute but never had seen before—Walter Pope's "Wish."

A second-hand bookseller, I found, may read much in his time, but he cannot read continuously. My perusal of Walter Pope's poem was broken somewhat in the way I have attempted to describe. I got through the Horatian argument all right, and I was allowed to complete in peace the first stanza and the chorus. . . .

But here entered a very small, dirty boy to know if I could spare his mother a piece of stamp paper.

I said it was the one thing we didn't keep, and resumed the poem. . . .

At this point there entered a rusty elderly man with a "Cruden's Concordance," to know if I would buy it. I said we already had several, and I could not as a conscientious business man add to the stock. He sighed, surveyed me attentively, and went away, saying that he would bring something else. I implored him not to, but with an ineffable look of misfortune he shuffled away. I turned again to [Walter Pope]. . . .

At this point a lady faltered in, saying she felt very faint, and might she sit down a moment. I gave her my chair, and called to Mrs. Duckie for some water. The lady told me her home was in Ashford, and she was only up for the day, having to get some things for her boy, who was joining a merchant-ship, and did I know where Heronsgate Mansions were, because she had a cousin living there whom she would like to see, and was there a good dentist in this neighborhood, and could I tell if the 4-43 to Ashford was still running.

Having at length resumed my chair, I proceeded with Walter Pope. . . .

The rusty man here came in again, and after spending a moment at the shelves, offered me another book, and pitched such a tale of woe that I bought it for myself. Two days afterwards, I may here remark, Miss Wagstaff came up to ask me if I had sold a copy of Rogers' "Italy" with Turner's plates while I was in charge.

"No," I said, "but I bought one."

She examined it swiftly, and informed me that it was their own copy which had been sold to me.

"He spotted you for a greenhorn all right," she said. "And had a starving family, hadn't he. And was only just out of the Brompton Hospital?"

I said it was so.

"Oh that Brompton Hospital!" She added: "Life would be quite simple if it had never been built. They've all got some one there when they want to sell a book."

I gave Miss Wagstaff the book again, and said I was very sorry.

"You'll always be taken in," she said, as she hurried off. "You go about asking for it."

Probably; but how can one say no to certain forms of distress, real or so well-managed as to seem real? After my experiences I know that it is not the disposal of books that presents the greatest difficulty to a bookseller, but the acquisition of them. At least, I know that that would be the case with me. My difficulty would always be to refuse to buy the books which the unhappy persons brought in. A very little while after the shabby man had departed with his ill-gotten gains, a neat little old woman entered with a brown paper parcel which she undid with excessive deliberation and care, revealing at last a shabby copy of an odd volume of Rowe's Shakespeare. At the same time she took out of her purse a folded newspaper cutting and placed it in my hands. Then she looked at me with an expression in which excitement, hope and fear were almost unbearably blended.

The wretched cutting, as I knew by inspired prevision, related to the sale of a first folio, which, after spirited bidding, was knocked down for £987. The pathetic figure before me had read the paper, had dimly remembered that among her dead husband's books was an old Shakespeare, and at last, with a beating heart, had found it and seen infinite possibilities of debt-paying and comfort before her.

What was I to do? She was manifestly so truthful, and the hope dying out of her poor eager face left it so wan and wintry.

A second-hand bookseller, I suppose, having chosen to be a second-hand bookseller and to live by his choice, has a short way with such clients. I know he must have. But I wondered what Mr. Bemerton would do, that is, if Miss Wagstaff permitted him to come on in that scene at all. The disparity between anything that I could give her and the sum she was expecting was clearly so immense that I did nothing at all. I merely said I was very sorry, and bowed her out, and returned once more to Walter Pope. . . .

Here a little girl from a neighboring shop ran in to ask for two sixpences for a shilling.

"You won't buy a nice set of Dickens, too?" I asked her, quite in the Wagstaffian manner, I thought.

"Not to-day," she said gravely, with perfect London readiness; "but mother'll be wanting the washing-book bound in morocco next week."

Here entered a studious-looking youth, who wished to know if I had a copy of Hoffding's "Psychology." I said no; and almost immediately after came a commanding matron with her daughter for a complete set of Trollope for an invalid son who was going on a voyage to the Cape. I said I was sorry, but I could not tell whether I had one or not; I was not the real bookseller, and knew nothing of the stock.

"I call it disgraceful," said the lady. "Mismanagement on all sides. We've only just been to the stores, and failed to get a pocket sextant. I can't think what's coming to London. Where are the standard novels kept in this shop?" she asked sternly.

"I have no idea," I replied. "Let's hunt for them together."

"Certainly not," she said, "I have no time," and off she marched; but not before her daughter, who looked as if she wished to sink into the earth for shame, had thrown me a glance of sympathetic compassion which was a perfect balm for any wounds I might have received. And then I finished Walter Pope's poem.

FAIR TRADE IN BOOKS.

In dealing with the subject of unfair competition—particularly with that form of competition resorted to by dealers in miscellaneous goods who select and undersell certain items upon which the retailers of special goods depend for a profit—the New York Journal of Commerce has the following to say of the struggle of the booktrade against the depredations of the department stores: "However the technicalities of legal rights and obligations under the existing law may be finally determined in the controversy between the book publishers and the department storekeepers in regard to selling copyrighted books at 'cut prices,' there can be no doubt about the merits of the case from the point of view of 'fair trade.' The argument in behalf of the association of publishers is convincing and unanswerable from that point of view, and the practice of department stores in buying large numbers of the most popular and best selling books and offering them as a special attraction for their shops at abnormally low prices, is nothing less than disreputable, because it is plainly destructive of the best interest of the publishing business and ruinous to the retail booktrade. But the strongest argument is that it is opposed to an important interest of the public.

"Bookselling is an insignificant part of the business of a department store, and if it is used as an advertising attraction it may be carried on at little or no profit in itself, to the possible advantage of the business as a whole, but it is distinctly a 'mean advantage' when it is done in a way to draw away from the booktrade its most profitable part and make it unprofitable to publish and distribute the best kind of literature, which has not the popular and best-selling quality. In order to conserve the interests of their business of the booktrade, and of the public in the wide distribution of good literature, as well as ephemeral fiction and picture books, the publishers should have the right to fix the selling price of their publications and be protected in that right, so long as they treat all dealers alike and the price is the same for all.

"Recent court decisions in this controversy are liable to misapprehension. The United States courts, including the Supreme Court, have simply held that violation of the conditions on which publishers sell their books to the trade cannot be construed as an infringement of the copyright. In other words, the terms of the copyright do not include the right to fix the price at which the books shall be sold after they leave the hands of the publishers, and those who cut the retail price cannot be punished or prevented under the copyright law. There is no intimation that an agreement to sell to dealers with the condition that the publishers' price must be maintained is anything but lawful and right. In the state courts that kind of an agreement has been upheld, and the refusal of publishers to sell to department stores or other dealers who will not accept the condition of charging the regular price at retail, is sustained as within their legal right. There ought to be a strong trade opinion in support of the publishers, for the principle has a wide application. Piracy in publishing has been pretty well outlawed and freebooting in the booktrade should be discountenanced."

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

MRS. GERTRUDE ATHERTON says that she intends to devote herself to the writing of historical works. The new novel she has recently finished will be her last work of fiction for some time.

LOÏE FULLER has been writing her reminiscences in French and is publishing them with a preface by Anatole France under the title of "Quinze Ans de ma Vie." Maud Allan, whose dancing has attracted so much attention in London this year, has also written a little volume which she calls "My Life and Dancing."

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, it is stated on the authority of the New York Times, has signed a contract with The Outlook to act as an associate editor after his retirement from the presidency in March next. This is made subject to the existing contract to write the story of his African travels for Charles Scribner's Sons. His work in connection with The Outlook is to cover political and economic topics.

CRITTENDEN MARRIOTT, the author of "Uncle Sam's Business," has had many remarkable experiences with which to enrich the books he writes. A man who has travelled seventy-five thousand miles in six years, faced, unarmed, wild beasts in the African jungle, served on board a boat loaded with dynamite and manned by a mutinous crew has plenty of material for tales of adventure. Mr. Mar-riott's knowledge of Uncle Sam's business in times of peace has been gained through various connections with the Government, notably in the work of the Geological Survey, at which he is now engaged.

MRS. MARY FAIRFAX CHILDS, author of "De Namin' ob de Twins, and Other Sketches from the Cotton Land," which has found such favor among lovers of Southern folklore, is the daughter of the Rev. Edward Fairfax Berkeley. In Lexington, Kentucky, where Mrs. Child's girlhood was spent, her father was for nineteen years rector of Christ Church, the same little church, by the way, of which James Lane Allen speaks so beautifully in the opening chapter of his "Flute and Violin." Married to a Southerner, herself born and reared in the South, it is little wonder that Mrs. Childs has gained that mastery of real negro dialect which is the decisive charm of her book.

BOOKTRADE ASSOCIATIONS.

THE BOOKSELLERS' LEAGUE.

THE next dinner of The Booksellers' League will be given on the evening of November 11, at the Aldine Association. Those desiring to attend must notify Charles A. Burkhardt, 31 West Twenty-third Street, New York City, not later than November 9, otherwise they will forfeit their dinner. At the meeting of the Board of Managers, held on October 27, twelve new members were elected.

PITTSBURGH BOOKSELLERS' AND STATIONERS' ASSOCIATION.

At the quarterly meeting of the Pittsburgh Booksellers' and Stationers' Association, held on the evening of October 26, the following officers were elected: George H. Alexander, president; A. W. McCloy, Sr., first vice-president; H. Lee Mason, Sr., second vice-president; Robert Crawford, treasurer; Charles H. Langbein, recording secretary, and Charles H. Clough, corresponding secretary.

BIBLIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

HOUGHTON MIFFLIN COMPANY will publish shortly a special limited edition of 500 copies of "A Bibliography of Henry David Thoreau," by Francis H. Allen.

CATALOGUES OF NEW AND SECOND-HAND BOOKS.

Maggs Bros., 109 Strand, London, Miscellaneous, including bibliography, drama, folklore, military and naval, bound sets of standard authors, etc. (No. 241, 1641 titles.)

Frederick Fairchild Sherman, 42 W. 39th St., New York, Literary Miscellany, including a catalogue of first editions, autograph letters and early American imprints. (60 p. 32°.)

Torch Press Book Shop, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Bargain list of remainders, No. 7. (24 p. 16°.)

BUSINESS NOTES.

NEW YORK CITY.—A petition in bankruptcy was filed on October 23 against the Globe Publishing Company, of 44 East Twenty-third Street, which built up a large business in the sale on the instalment plan of the "Encyclopedia Britannica," "Anglo-American Encyclopedia," and other publications. Judge Holt in the United States Court appointed Augustus H. Skillin receiver. The assets are placed at about $1,000,000, but the claims of creditors will probably reduce this materially, the petition says. The company was incorporated under New York laws in 1898 with a capital stock of $10,000. The company built up a very large business, and on January 1, 1907, claimed to have a surplus of about $500,000. There has been a large falling off in the business during the past year, caused by the general depression and inability to make prompt collections, which compelled the company to ask renewal of considerable of its paper. The controlling interest in the company was James A. Hill. John E. Rouse, president and treasurer for several years, died on April 19, 1907, and was succeeded by Alfred E. A. de Veitelle as president. The latter resigned about two months ago, and Mr. Hill became president.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Early next month A. C. McClurg & Co. will open an office in this city for the representation of their publications on the Pacific Coast. This office will be in charge of S. L. Willard, who has long been connected with the house—for the last seven years in important capacities associated with the publishing department. This step is the outgrowth of the increasing business in McClurg & Co.'s publications on the coast. Mr. Willard has also for the past four years been the travelling representative for their publications in that territory.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE only remaining unpublished novel by the late Henry Harland is to be brought out soon. It bears the title of "The Royal End."

L. C. PAGE & Co. will publish on November 2 the new volume in the Little Colonel Series, entitled "Mary Ware, the Little Colonel's Chum."

R. H. MERRIAM, formerly of Fremont, Ohio, has become a representative of the Joseph T. Dunham Company, brokers in books, 74 Cortland Street, New York City.

GEORGE WILLIAM BROWNING, Clinton, N. Y., has just brought out a work on "The Poetry of Thomas S. Jones, Jr.," by Jessie B. Rittenhouse, author of "The Younger American Poets."

THE CLUB FOR COLONIAL REPRINTS, Box 1275, Providence, R. I., will bring out at once its fifth publication—a reprint of "A Scheme for a Paper Currency, Together with Two Petitions written in Boston Gaol in 1739-1740," by Richard Fry, with an introduction by McFarland Davis.

CUPPLES & LEON COMPANY have just ready "The Christmas Letter," by Sara Tawney

Lefferts, the second of a series of four books, of which the first, "Mr. Cinnamon Bear," was a great success. The pictures are by Wuanita Smith, and are in colors and truly funny. The letter is written to Santa Claus, and the verses which follow show all the animals the children adored in the former book.

THE OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS, which is exhibiting in four different groups at the Franco-British Exhibition, has gained the great distinction of being awarded four Grand Prizes—one each for printing, books and bookbinding, reproductions of old manuscripts and drawings, and for Oxford India paper. The last is the only Grand Prize awarded for paper.

THE old Bailey House at Portsmouth, N. H., the boyhood home of Thomas Bailey Aldrich, which was opened as a memorial to the poet last July, had over 3600 visitors during the summer and has just been closed for the winter. It is restored and furnished almost precisely as it was when it was the scene of "The Story of a Bad Boy." The "Life" of Aldrich by Ferris Greenslet, already in its second edition, gives an interesting account of Aldrich's Portsmouth days.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY will publish shortly a new romance, "Captain Margaret," by John Masefield. This is Mr. Masefield's first novel, although he has an established reputation as a writer of sea poetry, sailors' tales and plays. "Captain Margaret" is a sea novel of a kind entirely new, and there is charm and poetry about the work that will fascinate the reader. The scenes are laid among the adventurers who made the Caribbean Sea their hunting ground in the days before the collapse of Spain's sea power.

✓SMALL, MAYNARD & Co. have just ready a work on "The American Stage of To-day," by Walter Prichard Eaton, dramatic critic of the New York Sun. It is nearly ten years since the appearance of any similar work, and during that time important changes have marked the evolution of the stage in this country. Mr. Eaton's contribution to the subject is fascinating and informing, and will stimulate the reader to a new understanding of the meaning and the value of our time in the progress and development of the American stage.

A. C. McCLURG & Co. will publish at once a volume of "Studies of the Eighteenth Century in Italy," by Vernon Lee. The volume will contain studies both literary and musical, the essay on Goldoni, for example, covering the history of the greatest of early Italian dramatists, while Pergolesi, Piccini, Jomelli and others of the composers of that day are treated with similar thoroughness and comprehension. The illustrations for the book have been selected by Dr. Guido Biagi. Nothing is better calculated to carry on the interest now growing in Italian art and letters.

THE TORCH PRESS, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, has in active preparation "The Life and Times of Anne Royall," who was the representative newspaper woman of her day, and whose career stretched from the last days of George III. till the rise to prominence of Abraham Lincoln. The biography is by Sarah Harvey Porter, of the Columbia Historical Society, Washington, D. C. They have in active preparation a "Biography of the Late Dr. David Swing of Chicago," by the Rev. Joseph Newton, of Dixon, Ill. Many photographs of this very popular preacher will be given in Mr. Newton's book.

RICHARD G. BADGER, Boston, announces "Recollections of Seventy Years," by Franklin B. Sanborn; "Abraham Lincoln's Religion," by Madison C. Peters; "The Country Band," by Henry A. Shute, author of "The Real Diary of a Real Boy;" "Lila Sari," a romance of the Southern Pacific, by William Lee Howard; "Mrs. John Vernon," a study of a social situation, by Julia De Wolf Addison; "Menotomy," a romance of 1776, by Margaret L. Sears; "Every Man His Chance," a story of to-day, by Matilda Woods Stone; also, the second volume of the Comrades Courageous Series, "Skimming the Skies," by Russell Whitcomb.

THE JOHN MCBRIDE COMPANY, New York, are reissuing the "Utopia" of Sir Thomas More, translated afresh by Valerian Paget into thorough-paced modern English, under the title "More's Millennium," with a view to opening the pages of one of the most wonderful bits of romantic and imaginative writing in English literature to the general reader of to-day. Professor Churton Collins writes that as a romance and work of art it ranks in celebrity with "Pilgrim's Progress," "Robinson Crusoe" and "Gulliver's Travels." It is undoubtedly as entertaining, and it is the hope of the publishers that their modernization will make it as attractive as a novel to readers of current literature.

GEORGE W. JACOBS & Co. have just ready "The Dictionary of Quotations," a collection on every imaginable subject so keyed and indexed that any one quotation on any one subject can be easily found, making it a most useful book for any professional writer; "The Footsteps of Scott," by W. S. Crockett, telling in charming manner of the wizard's glorious country; "The Complete Oarsman," by R. C. Lehmann, an authority on his subject; and a second edition of "Practical Publicity," written in 1906 by A. De Weese, advertising manager of The Shredded Wheat Company, Niagara Falls, a practical advertising man, who explains with practical demonstrations that advertising is one of the mightiest factors in the business world.

HILLS & HAFELY COMPANY, New York City, have brought out a line of Condolence Cards "to comfort all that mourn," an acceptable substitute for the letters of condolence in which most persons find it so difficult to express their feelings for friends in bereavement. The cards are in the form of a dainty four-page leaflet, containing five verses expressive of the Christian's conception of Death, the promises of our Faith, and the belief in the Resurrection, compiled by "Gretchen," an English churchwoman, gifted as a writer of tender and touching verses, printed in purple and silver and enclosed with parchment covers, tied with silk ribbon. Each verse is preceded by an appropriate quotation from Scripture. The leaflet as a whole reflects excellent typographical dress and will appeal to people of culture.

FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY publish to-day "The Web of Time," by Robert E. Knowles, the "Ian Maclaren" of Canada, who in this new story pictures a type of rugged, honest, God-fearing people that will take rank with the characters of "The Little Minister;" "The Angel and the Star," by Ralph Connor, a timely Christmas story in which is pictured the birth of Christ, reflecting the spirit of its day and giving accurate descriptions of Bethlehem and its surroundings; and the first two volumes of the Author's edition of this writer's works, illustrated by Griselda Marshall McClure, gotten up in six volumes, boxed. The first ones, of course are "Black Rock: a Tale of the Selkirks," and "The Sky Pilot: a Tale of the Foothills," and Ralph Connor himself is delighted with the work the talented artist has done to bring his section of the world before the public.

THE JOHN LANE COMPANY have brought out this week a new novel by Clara Viebig, author of "Absolution," entitled "Our Daily Bread." It is a vivid picture of social conditions among the lower classes. Stephen Reynolds has made a novel record of the life of a native fisherman of Devon in a journal of his own experiences as a member of the fisherman's household, which is also issued this week by the John Lane Company, under the title "A Poor Man's House." The author collected the material for purposes of fiction and is perhaps unusual among writers of the day in thinking that such a transcript can be presented to a wide audience without being cast in the usual form of a novel. While, therefore, being the record of fact, the books has the qualities of lively narrative. "A Spanish Holiday," which the same house is issuing this week, is the record by Charles Marriott of out-of-the-way corners of Spain, illustrated with an unusual series of water color sketches reproduced in original colors.

THOMAS Y. CROWELL & Co. have just ready some very pleasing books for young readers. "Old Man Coyote," by Clara Kern Bayliss, illustrated in colors by E. W. Blaisdell, is made up of a group of legends first told by the Indians themselves, of which Old Man Coyote, half god, half animal, is the hero. He perpetually confuses his dual nature, and many foolish and laughable adventures are the outcome of his separate identities. "The Fire-Fly's Lovers," by William E. Griffis, is a delightful series of fairy tales of Old Japan which still enchant the youngsters of the Sunrise Kingdom, illustrated in colors by Japanese artists; "Stories of Persian Heroes" is a stirring volume replete with oriental coloring, by E. M. Wilmot Buxton, taken direct from the nation's book of kings, called the "Shah-Nameh;" and "Treasury of Verse for Little Children" is a gift book edited by Madalen G. Edgar, who takes the verses from best authors, for which Willy Pogany supplies colored illustrations the very youngest child will appreciate.

LONGMANS, GREEN & Co. have nearly ready a new book by Mr. Lang on Jeanne d'Arc, entitled "The Maid of France: being the Story of the Life and Death of Jeanne d'Arc." This is an attempt to fill a gap in our literature, and Mr. Lang hopes that he has been able to throw new light on certain obscure parts of the history, and conceives that he has refuted many old and new imputations against the intelligence and the greatness of the martyr. The narrative is given uninterruptedly; the discussion of the "Visions" and "Voices" and of other difficult matters is relegated to appendices, and all references to authorities and controversial notes are given at the end of the volume. The volume will have a map and various illustrations. They will also publish shortly a volume on "Henry Stuart, Cardinal of York," by Miss Shields, whose book on the Old Pretender—"The King Over the Water," published last year, met with considerable success. The book will have a preface by Mr. Lang and will be illustrated with portraits.

THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY has just published the first book written by Brian Hooker, entitled "The Right Man." Hooker is a Yale '02 man, a true son of "Old Eli"—the author of the Yale battle hymn, "Mother of Men," which won a $300 prize last year, and now an instructor in rhetoric at his Alma Mater. He has contributed verse to Scribner's and The Forum and an imaginative tale of mediæval England to Harper's. To this work "The Right Man" is in striking contrast, with a theme and setting of the immediate here-and-now. "The Right Man" belongs to the same series of "gift fiction" as "The Best Man," by Harold MacGrath, published a year ago. An effort has been made to render the volume attractive as a holiday present. There are nine striking pictures by Alonzo Kimball, reproduced in full-color photogravure—the first time this process has been applied to the illustrating of books. They were printed four times before the proper effect could be obtained. They have added to their series of Gift-Book Fiction "The Mascot of Sweet Briar Gulch," by Henry Wallace Phillips, and "The Better Treasure," by Mary Raymond Shipman Andrews.

THE automobile and the airship have had their novels, and more than one of them, but apparently electricity is yet a comparatively fresh field for the novelists. Henry Holt & Company have arranged with Miss Adele Marie Shaw and Miss Carmelita Beckwith for a novel to be entitled "The Lady of the Dynamos." The lady in question is a very attractive English girl who, when the American electrical engineer discovers her, is doing her best to learn what she can about dynamos from a book. She proves a trusty chum to him, and gives him much aid and comfort in the struggles and perils incident to his developing a remote corner of Ceylon. They expect to have ready before the end of November "Chapters of Opera," by Henry E. Krehbiel, the musical critic of the New York Tribune, and author of "Music and Manners in the Classical Period," "Studies in the Wagnerian Drama," "How to Listen to Music," etc. While the bulk of the book is made from the papers under this title that Mr. Krehbiel has been contributing to the Sunday issues of the New York Tribune during the last two summers, he has considerably revised them, and condensed the part dealing with opera before the opening of the Metropolitan into his first seven chapters. He will add a new one on Mr. Hammerstein's two seasons at the Manhattan Opera House.

THE "Novum Testamentum Sinaiticum Petropolitanum" is announced by the Oxford University Press. It is pointed out that, of the many discoveries of Biblical manuscripts in the nineteenth century, none was more important, whether for the study of palæography or for the history of the text, than that of the great codex of the fourth century, which Constantine Tischendorf discovered in 1844 in the Monastery of St. Catherine on Mount Sinai. This manuscript was ultimately presented to the Emperor of Russia, Tsar Alexander, in 1862, and so passed, seven years later, into the Imperial Library in St. Petersburg. It was the earnest desire, as well of the Tsar as of Tischendorf, to issue a photographic facsimile of the great codex, but at that time the art of photography was not sufficiently advanced. Now, however, Professor and Mrs. Kirsopp Lake, of Leyden, have taken a set of full-size negatives of the New Testament portion of the codex. These will be published in 1909, by the collotype process, with a preface by Professor Lake, stating the palæographical problems, and an appendix on the chronology of the correctors by Professor Papadopoulos Kerameus, the chief of the section of theology in the Imperial Library. The New Testament part of the manuscript, including the Epistle of Barnabas and the remaining leaves of the Shepherd of Hermas, will occupy 296 pages of the facsimile. The price to subscribers will be £6 6s. net. The Oxford University Press will also publish next year "The Origin of Christianity," practically completed by the late Dr. Bigg at the time of his death. The work is now being seen through the press by Dr. T. B. Strong, Dean of Christ Church.

HENRY HOLT & Co. have made arrangements to bring out a book entitled "The Opera Since Wagner," by Henry Taylor Parker, who writes the notable reviews of musical plays signed "H. T. P." in the Boston Transcript. Mr. Parker will seek to follow the unexpected and far-reaching development of opera in our day since Wagner's music-dramas became an established part of the operatic repertory, and so ended an operatic epoch. The book will contain chapters upon the new generation of Italian composers from Mascagni and Leoncavallo through Puccini and Giordano; upon the newer French opera as exemplified by Debussy, Dukas, Chaspenier, Massenet and others; upon Strauss, Humperdinck and d'Albert for German composers; and upon the operas of the Russian composers that are beginning to make their way into the Western world. Other chapters will discuss the changes in operatic acting and operatic setting that the newer operas have accomplished. Mr. Parker undertakes this book at the request of one of the officers of the Holt Corporation, who was charmed with his highly effective paper on "Pelléas and Mélisande" last spring. They will bring out shortly "Christ Legends," by Selma Lagerlöf, translated by Mrs. Velma Swanston Howard. Miss Lagerlöf gathered the material for most of these legends, many of which are not even alluded to in the Scriptures, in the Orient. She treats them in a manner that, with all proper reverence for their subjects, is said to give them the fascination of fairy tales, and at the same time to be intensely human. She also works into them, with rare artistic skill, the mysticism of the Orient. A notable feature of the book will be the striking cover and decorations by Miss Bertha Stuart.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS will publish early in November an original volume, entitled "The Lincoln Centennial Medal." The medal, in silver and bronze, is the one made by E. F. Roine, of Paris, the well-known medallist, and is mounted in a heavy board page and detachable therefrom. It is bound up with a selection of the characteristic utterances of the great emancipator, and forms a most appropriate memorial of the hundredth anniversary of the birth of Lincoln. They will also bring out next month "Bartholomew Las Casas—his life, his apostolate and his writings," by Francis Augustin MacNutt, a comprehensive sketch of the 16th century historian of Spanish-America and the defender of the Indians who fared so ill at the hands of their Christian conquerors; "The Sloops of the Hudson," a history of the packet sloops of last century, and their names, together with reminiscences of several notable North River sailing masters, by William E. Verplanck and Moses W. Collyer; "The Writings of Washington," edited by Professor Laurence B. Evans, the first volume of the new series of Writings of American Statesmen; "The Century of the Child," by Ellen Key, the Swedish writer, whose arguments against the mechanical method of education have been warmly applauded; "The Blackstick Papers," by Lady Ritchie, (Anne Thackeray Ritchie,) a collection of essays dealing with men and books and other matters; "The Philosophy of Self-help," by Stanton Davis Kirkham, which is designed to show how, by a training and use of the mind, it is possible for every one to secure at least a large measure of mental health and physical well-being; also, "The Art of Natural Sleep," with definite directions for the wholesome cure of sleeplessness, by the Rev. Lyman P. Powell, author of the recent book "Christian Science."

HOUGHTON MIFFLIN COMPANY have just ready "The Calico Cat," by Charles Miner Thompson, author of "The Nimble Dollar,"

etc., a tale of the mystifying entanglements and laughable misunderstandings which arose from an impulsive assault on a calico cat by an eminently respectable New Englander, with a number of excellent illustrations; "The Home Builder," by Lyman Abbott, editor of The Outlook, a portrait study of an ideal wife and mother, which may be said to form almost a modern counterpart of the last chapter of the Book of Proverbs; "The Poems of Richard Watson Gilder," in the Household edition, of which 200 copies of the first impression have been signed by the author and bound with uncut edges and paper label; "Buddhism and Immortality," the Ingersoll lecture for 1908 on the immortality of man delivered at Harvard University, by Dr. William S. Bigelow, who has lived many years in the Orient and has made an unusually intimate and profound study of the Buddhist religion and philosophy; a large paper edition of Defoe's "Robinson Crusoe," modelled upon the lines of the "Letters of James Howell," a form especially appropriate for the embodiment of a book of Robinson Crusoe's date, with some sixteen illustrations which consist of beautiful reproductions of the fine engravings by Thomas Stothard; "The Story of the Greek People," an introductory history of Greece written for young people by Eva March Tappan, author of "American Hero Stories," etc.; also, a Riverside Press edition of "The Banquet of Plato," translated by Shelley, brought out in a severely classic form, without ornament or page decoration of any kind. They will bring out this winter a Riverside Press edition of "The Life and Work of Geoffroy Tory," by Auguste Bernard, now first translated by George B. Ives. With the exception of Montaigne's Essays this will be by far the most important of Bruce Roger's books. They have also nearly ready a special edition of Arnold Haultain's unique work on "The Mystery of Golf," which should easily appeal to twice the 400 for whom copies are to be printed.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted" book-trade subscribers, under their own names, are given the privilege of a free advertisement for books out of print of five nonpareil lines, exclusive of address, in any issue except special numbers to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent the excess is at 10 cents a line, and amount should be inclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, or those advertising anonymously, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents a line. All objectionable books will be excluded so far as they come under our notice.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents a nonpareil line for each insertion. No reduction for repeated matter.

All other small undisplaced advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents a nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no account must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their Communications.

BOOKS WANTED.

In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.

Houses that are willing to deal exclusively on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word [Cash.]

Write your wants plainly, and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly," does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay" book-sellers should take the usual precautions, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

When Daddy Was a Boy

By THOMAS WOOD PARRY

ILLUSTRATED BY H. WOOD

A book of real childhood, in thirty-three stories, all beautifully illustrated. Stories true to nature, entertaining, full of natural humor, negro dialect and plantation lore.

The book will entertain and instruct every child, and interest every real lover of children. It has been a success from the day of its publication. Everywhere it has gained at once the endorsement of educators, ministers, book dealers, parents and children.

No juvenile library is complete without it.

ARE THESE ON YOUR COUNTER?

A LITTLE MAID IN TOYLAND

By Adah Louise Sutton

It rivals the classic Alice, and the child will find a laugh tucked away on every page. Quarto, boards, illustrated in colors, $1.00.

BILLY WHISKERS AT THE CIRCUS (Trade Mark) By F. G. Wheeler

Billy's antics this season are fully up to his standard. What does any boy or girl like better than a circus—and their old friend Billy Whiskers? Quarto, boards, 6 full pages in colors, $1.00.

TOODLES OF TREASURE TOWN AND HER SNOWMAN

By Frederic Chapin

Over 150 illustrations by Merle Johnson tell by pictures the charming wonder tale Mr. Chapin has put in words. TOODLES is a most handsome juvenile, 43 of its pages being in colors. Large quarto, cloth, illustrated in colors, $1.50.

BROWNYBOO. Verse by Florence Lapen, Drawings by Harry Miller

A beautiful Christmas book of verse. Eight pages in colors. Every alternate page in tint. A border decoration with single stanza makes each page a delight. Quarto, boards, cover in colors, $1.25.

THE WONDER-CHILD

By Ethel Turner

Miss Turner is known as Louise M. Alcott's successor. Her books have all the charm of the Alcott writings, and THE WONDER-CHILD will make a strong appeal to the heart of every girl. 12mo, cloth, half-tones by GORDON BROWNE, $1.50.

THE TOWER ANGEL

By Mary E. Ireland

A refreshing girl's book, with Germany as a setting. Written with the rare sympathy that so strongly characterizes and distinguishes this popular author. 12mo, cloth, illustrations in half-tone, $1.00.

IN SHIP AND PRISON

By William P. Chipman

A sea tale, depicting the Revolutionary struggle in which our infant navy snatched so many signal victories from the British. 12mo, cloth, illustrated, $1.50.

AUTHORIZED BY WHISTLER

The Life of James McNeill Whistler

By ELIZABETH ROBINS PENNELL
and JOSEPH PENNELL

The litigation over this book has established the fact that it is the Life authorized and planned by Whistler himself, and that it is based on material furnished by himself and by his family. Mr. and Mrs. Pennell's intimate friendship with Mr. Whistler gave them that opportunity of personal knowledge which no biographer, who had only documents to work from, could possibly possess. They speak with authority of Whistler as a man, as well as with full appreciation of him as an artist, and it is not too much to claim that this book has artistic and human interest such as few other biographies could have.
